Course Description

This course is the required interdisciplinary core course for the Collaborative Program in South Asian Studies. As such, it will provide students with an understanding of the breadth of research in South Asia across a variety of disciplines. To achieve this, students will interact with a representative sample of professors at the U of T who will provide examples of different research topics, methods, and presentation approaches. This breadth of research will be cross-cut by a focus on the development of each student's own research and writing skills, through a series of writing projects on grant proposal writing and reviewing, and on summaries of students' research topics. These writing projects will be designed to encourage writing that is intelligible across disciplines, but also will be oriented towards material most appropriate to the student's own program.

Readings

--Each weekly presenter will assign readings for their portion of the course. Most should be available on CCNet. Be sure to look at BOTH the box on the Schedule AND the information in the References list.

--For the grant portion of the course, read all on-line information for all applicable grants. Additional appropriate material will be posted on or linked from CCNet after the first meeting, once the range of student proposals becomes clear.

Course Requirements and Grading Total course mark is 100% = 400 points

[1] 20% (80 points) of the course mark will be based on participation in class. This includes class attendance, involvement in class discussion, and weekly written submission of 1-2 page statements on the assigned readings.

[2] 50% (200 points) for Writing Project 1: Grant Proposal Writing. 25% for helpful critical comments on other students' initial proposals, and 25% for your own final grant proposal packet, in part based on improvement from the first draft. See handout for details.

[3] 30% (120 points) for Writing Project 2: EITHER a polished summary of student's own research in progress for their degree program, a summary that would be intelligible across disciplinary lines, OR students may elect to write an (imaginary) collaborative grant proposal, based in part on ideas from faculty presentations about their own research. Choice of writing project required by midterm.
