Most first year courses are big lectures with a few hundred students in the class. Not all questions can be answered in the lecture, so professors hold weekly office hours to individually answer any questions that arise. Professor Jayne Baker advises new students to make the best use of their professor’s office hours as this not only helps them in doing better in the course, but also forms a bond with the faculty member that opens doors for many new opportunities.

Research shows that the students that are more involved on campus and in the community tend to do better academically. Mariam Hanna recounts her first year experience, explaining how she realized the importance of volunteering and discovering that it made her university experience more enriching, valuable, and fun!

Introduce yourself!
Hi! My name is Layemi, I'm 17 and I'm from Nigeria, though I have attended school in Dubai, England, and now Canada. I play the violin and piano, sing and try to do yoga every now and then. I chose UTM because it is such a prestigious institution, and I am sure it will present different challenges for me which I am always up for.

What are you excited about?
I'm looking forward to working out at UTM's gym, which I hear is very advanced.

Share one thing on your bucket list:
The thing at the top of my bucket list is to travel to at least 20 countries, and I'm getting there with 13 so far.

ARE YOU READY?

UTM LIFEHACKS

On campus the whole day and your phone battery runs out? Don't worry! You can always check out phone chargers from the library or the UTMSU and charge your phone away!
Navigating new experiences can be a challenge, especially when you're attending university - there are so many unknowns and so much to learn. Let LAUNCH be your guide! LAUNCH is your chance to meet students in your program that share similar goals and interests. Learn from an academically successful upper-year student mentor about the many aspects of being a UTM student that include resources and academic skills, getting involved on campus, health and wellness, and more, while building a community with other LAUNCH students in a smaller classroom experience. Three separate options are available: UTM101H5 - LAUNCH: Business, Commerce and Management; UTM102H5: Science, Mathematics and Psychology; UTM103H5: Humanities and Social Sciences. Join us in the Fall 2016 term and LAUNCH your university experience!
