

DePaul University

Department of Modern Languages, 802 West Belden, Chicago, IL 60614-3214

Assistant/Associate Professor of Italian

The Department of Modern Languages seeks to fill a tenure-track position in Italian, beginning September 1, 2010. Specialization open. Candidates must demonstrate experience as a dynamic and effective teacher of Italian language and culture at all levels, as well as literature or linguistics. Background in pedagogy and language coordination a plus. We are looking for an individual who can contribute to an already thriving undergraduate program that includes a fall-term study abroad program in Rome. Candidates should have the ability to design and teach interdisciplinary courses in Italian culture for intermediate/advanced language learners, as well as more traditional upper-level courses. PhD in hand and a clearly-defined research agenda, as well as native or near-native fluency in Italian fundamental. Please attach a cover letter and CV. Please have three letters of recommendation sent to: Glen Carman, Associate Professor and Chair, Department of Modern Languages, DePaul University, 802 West Belden Avenue, Chicago, IL 60614. To apply, please visit the following URL: facultyopportunities.depaul.edu/applicants/Central?quickFind=50637.

The application deadline is December 1.

As an Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) employer, DePaul University provides job opportunities to qualified individuals without regard to race, color, ethnicity, religion, sex, sexual orientation, national origin, age, marital status, physical or mental disability, parental status, housing status, source of income or military status, in accordance with applicable federal, state and local EEO laws.