The Royal Regiment of Canada is currently offering opportunities to serve within the Canadian Armed Forces Army Reserve - part-time during the academic year (e.g., September to early May) and full-time during the summer months (e.g., May - end of August).

The Canadian Army Reserve is on a mission to grow and we need smart, talented Canadians who want to earn and learn as part of a diverse, skilled team of professionals. Also, the Canadian Army can assist in funding your education through one of the paid education programs.

Make a commitment to the Canadian Army Reserve and we’ll commit to giving you steady, full-time summer employment in your first four years, guaranteed (to qualified candidates). That’s solid financial support for your education while you gain skills and professional contacts and experience to bulk up your resume.

When you are not taking part in full-time summer employment, just one day a week and one weekend a month is all it takes. Service in the Reserve means getting paid to get fit, learn and possibly travel. It’s meaningful work that makes a real difference to Canadians – you may be called upon to help during natural disasters across Canada, such as forest fires and floods.

The Reserve is an equal opportunity workplace where you’ll make lifelong friends as part of a remarkable team. Be a part of something bigger than yourself with the Army Reserve.

At Tutor Doctor, our private tutors understand the importance of your child’s education. Your child is embarking on a journey that will not only provide them with the educational building blocks they need to succeed, but will help shape the very person they become. Along this path they will face triumphs and challenges, both in school and in their personal lives. Whether that’s discovering who they are, making new friends, or handling their first heartbreak, each experience is unique.

We are here to guide students through this exciting and sometimes challenging journey, helping them succeed in academics, and in life. We meet our students where they are, to get them where they need to go. We take the time to understand the way they learn, and adapt our techniques to coincide with their needs. In their homes. At their pace. On their terms. This is how learning hits home.
