Art and Art History Dr. Annie Smith Travel Award

1 Award @ $11,485.00

Professor Annie Smith (1940-2007) assumed the position of Art and Art History Program Coordinator in 1976. Over the next six years, she reassessed the existing generalist three-year degree program in art education and developed the present professional fine art focus of the Art and Art History Specialist (four-year) degree program. In 1982, for the first time, the program offered its students fourth-year courses in both studio and art history.

Annie wished to help graduates travel and experience art firsthand. Travel will take place in the year after graduation. Applicants must be graduating students.

Activities might include research, artistic collaboration, an internship, an artist residency, having an exhibition, or visiting an online biennial, film or video festival. If you are doing something to which you must apply and be accepted — such as a residency, internship, or exhibition — you should submit a contingency plan with your application in case your application is not accepted. Your application will be assessed on the connection you make between your plans and the direction of your art practice.

Within two years of the completion of the award, the recipient is required to present an illustrated lunch-hour talk in the Annie Smith Centre on the travel experience and artwork made/viewed.
