Closing date: April 5, 2019

Course title: IFA2905H- Advanced Forensic Investigation & Psychological Aspects of White Collar Crime (Summer 2019)

of Positions: 2 (Instructors)

Class schedule: Online sessions will typically be scheduled on Thursday from 19:00-22:00 EST/EDT
The Capstone Residency will be held for 6 days mid August (2- 3 hour sessions)

Dates of appointment: May 8 – August 28, 2019

Description of course:

Building upon the introduction to investigative techniques in earlier courses, IFA 2905H will continue the coverage and introduce topics germane to forensic accountants in the future. In addition, to build an understanding of the psychology and practices of financial/white collar criminals, current research findings, studies, and examples will be examined. Specific investigative matters to be discussed will include: planned bankruptcies and insolvencies; arson and murder for profit; criminal code frauds; and structured investigative approaches.

IFA 2905H will be taught online in 6 once-per-week, interactive sessions, 3 hours in length, followed by 2 – 3 hour sessions on the campus of UTM. There will be an individual assignment plus an exam.
