

Arsalan Kahnemuyipour: Prof. Kahnemuyipour received his PhD in Linguistics from the Department of Linguistics at the University of Toronto in 2004. He taught at Syracuse University (Upstate New York) from 2004 to 2010. He joined the Department of Language Studies at U of T Mississauga in 2010. His areas of expertise are syntax (sentence structure), morphology (word structure) and the interface between syntax and phonology (the sound system). He has worked on a number of languages including his native Persian, as well as English, Armenian, Turkish, Niuean, among others. He has published a book with Oxford University Press and articles in top ranked journals such as Natural Language and Linguistic Theory and Linguistic Inquiry. He is currently the Book Review Editor of the Canadian Journal of Linguistics.