

PHILOSOPHY (HBA)

Department of Philosophy

What is knowledge? What is justice? When is war justified? What sort of thing am I - a (merely) physical entity, or something more? What makes me, me? Where is the line between art and propaganda? In philosophy, we ask and try to answer some of the deepest questions confronting us as human beings. Our philosophical reflections are guided by critical engagements with the views of great thinkers like Plato, Aristotle, Descartes, Nietzsche, and many others.

Philosophy teaches you to read critically and write in a succinct and compelling way - perhaps the most important communicative skills you will ever develop. It also asks you to express, and shows you how to defend, your own views. This type of "dialectical" activity will enable you to discover what you think and value, and to express your views persuasively. These skills are vital to success in almost any career path one could follow, from law and journalism to marketing and business administration.

MAKE THE MOST OF YOUR TIME AT UTM!

We want to help you maximize your university experience, so we've pulled together information and interesting suggestions to get you started, although there are many more! As you review the chart on the inside pages, note that many of the suggestions need not be restricted to the year they are mentioned. In fact, activities such as joining an academic society, engaging with faculty and seeking opportunities to gain experience should occur in each year of your study at UTM. Read through the chart and create your own plan using My Program Plan found at www.utm.utoronto.ca/program-plans

PHILOSOPHY

Skills developed in Philosophy

To be competitive in the job market, it is essential that you can explain your skills to an employer. Visit the Career Centre to learn how to articulate and market the following skills:

Critical thinking & problem-solving: logical reasoning, identifying key issues in decision-making or problem solving.

Communication: developing and defending a position; anticipating and addressing objections; speaking and writing clearly and succinctly; saying exactly what you mean.

Information gathering: interpreting, analyzing, and critically evaluating complex texts.

Research: working independently and engaging with both historical and contemporary texts.

Ethics & values: identifying and clarifying alternative points of view and systems of values; reflecting on your own values in a disciplined way.

FUTURE STUDENTS

Admission to UTM

All program areas require an Ontario Secondary School Diploma, or equivalent, with six Grade 12 U/M courses, or equivalent, including English. The admission average is calculated with English plus the next best five courses. The approximate average required for admission is mid- to high-70s. More information is available at utm.utoronto.ca/viewbook.

NOTE: During the application process, applicants will select Humanities admissions category but will not officially be admitted to a formal program of study (Specialist, Major, and/or Minor) until after first year.

Sneak Peek

In this age of global markets and cultural juxtapositions, nuclear threats and “alternative facts”, you will want to know about the best philosophical work on justice, rights, welfare and political authority. Check out PHL365H5: Issues in Political Philosophy.

UTM Philosophy aims to inculcate in students the values of intellectual perseverance, clarity of thought and communication, and creativity.
